They were waving fluttering masses of flags and chrysanthemums. From both sides of the great concrete slopes there rose a tremendous turnly of singing and rythmic rooting. mult of singing and rythmic rooting. Down on the green infield the little No. Princeton squad seemed the most indenificant thing in the whole picture. But a moment later the Blue Jersey warriors, running shoulder to der in battle formation, dashed continto the middle of the field. The attention of the great crowd was centered on the two teams.

After a moment the players withdrew to the side line and Capts, Black and Hogg toseed the coin. Black won the toss and chose to defend the north goal, leaving Princeton to kick off against the wind.

FIRST QUARTER.

Gennert kicked off, to the 15 yard line. Laroche fumbled the ball, but legore recovered it and came out to Yale's 37 yard line before Driggs caught him. Legore punted 50 yards to Ames but the ball was brought back. No penalty was inflicted on either team. Legore punted out of bounds on Princeton's $3 yard line. Brown ripped straight through for 5 yards. Driggs tried to get around Yale's right end but gained only a few inches. Then he sent a long punt to Laroche who was tackled by Highley and thrown flat on Yale's 30 yard line. line. Laroche fumbled the ball, but Puts on Best Clothes and Gold- Report Is Also Contradicted by Mrs. Macy, Lifelong Companion of Miss Keller.

> BOSTON, Nov. 18 .- According to City Registrar Edward W. McGlenen, an application was made to him at the City Hall ten days ago for a license to wed Miss Helen Keller. The application, according to Mr. Mc-Glenen, was made by Miss Keller's secretary, Peter Fagan, a former newspaperman of this city. It was refused because Fagan insisted on absolute secrecy until the marriage became a fact.

Fagan to-day declared the rumor to be "the wildest thing I've heard of in a long time." But acquaintances said the only reason for secrecy was the opposition to the match offered by Mrs. John Macy, the woman who has been Miss Keller's teacher since early girlhood.

Miss Keller also denied the report through her companion, Mrs. Annie S. Macy.

Captain of Liner Surprised to Learn He Was Supposed to Be at Bottom of Sea.

Capt. W. J. Martin of the Red Cross Line Steamer Florizel was considerably surprised to-day when an Evening World reporter went aboard his ship at the Red Cross pier in Brooklyn and told him he and the Florizel were supposed to be at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean.

The captain said he was more or less certain that the Florizel, her captain and crew and 16,000 barrels of red herring, each barrel containing 2,000 herring, or a cargo of 32,-000,000 thirst producing fish, were safe and sound within sight of the Brooklyn Bridge. The captain was shown a despatch in the morning newspapers from St. John's N. F., stating that the Florisel had been damaged by collision with a pier in Belle Isle, Conception Bay, last Thursday and had drifted from anchorage ground in the harbor during the night and disappeared. This was startling news to Capt. Martin for he wasn't near Conception Hay on Thursday night.
